

Chapter 5B

The Responses to Classical Liberalism

Luddism

Responses to Conditions Created by Classical Liberalism (Pg 125)

- Not all people believed that industrialization was progressive
- The Luddites were one of those groups
- Between 1812-1816 Luddites broke in to factories, destroyed machines and attacked factory owners in their homes.

Who Were the Luddites?

Responses to Conditions Created by Classical Liberalism (Pg 125)

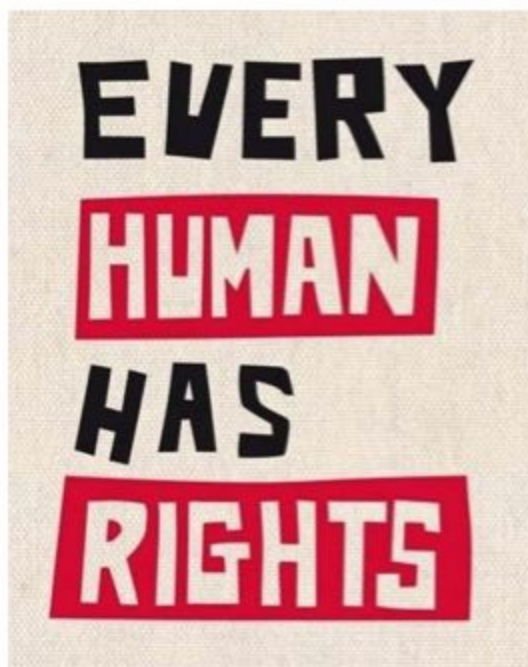

- Luddites saw machines as destroying the value of skilled laborers and destroying their way of life
- The government eventually started punishing the Luddites and death was threatened to any who broke machines

Responses to Conditions Created by Classical Liberalism (Pg 125)

- Many different political and social movements developed in the 1800's and 1900's
- These groups started to advocate for many different groups in society including
 - Children
 - Working class
 - Women

Responses to Conditions Created by Classical Liberalism (Pg 125)

- There was a movement to think about human rights in general

Voting Rights The Factory Acts

Expansion of Voting Rights and The Factory Acts in Great Britain

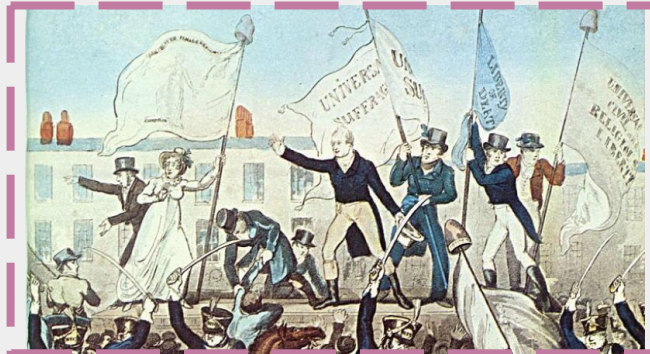

The Beginnings of Change

- As more and more people became aware of the growing poverty of the working class in from the Industrial Revolution, there were calls for change
 - Many people believed that the condition suffered by children and the working class were unacceptable
 - The people started to talk about ways that the new wealth of society could be shared
- Classical liberal governments were pressured to impose some restrictions on the laissez-faire economy.

Voting Rights of British Citizens

Before 1832

- Only white men who owned property worth a certain value and high social status were able to vote.
- Elections mainly favored aristocracies and wealthy owners.
- Fewer than 1 in 10 men could vote

Timeline Of Voting Rights

Reform act, (a series of laws that changed the voting system) expanded voting rights by increasing the number of male voters.

- 1832 Requirements to vote and participate- Males, white, wealthy and property owners

1884 - Aimed at including men who worked in agriculture (farmers) and more urban workers (factory workers, craftsman) - Majority of men can vote at this point.

1928 was the equal franchise (all citizens eligible to vote) no matter their race, wealth or gender, 21 and over

1928

1867

1918

1867 - Influenced by the Chartists, the second reform act allowing the vote to a larger number of men who lived in urban areas and who paid a certain amount of rent for their properties

A milestone as it granted the right for men over the age of 21 and woman over 30 to vote

- 1918 Requirements- Only woman married to property owners were able to vote

1969 - Age 18+

Voting Rights of British Citizens

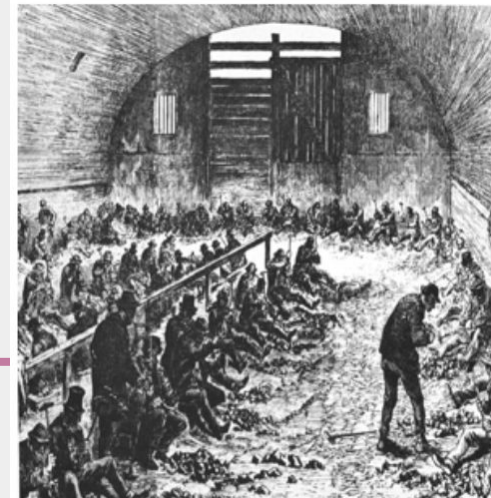

Summary:

- Took until 1884 until a majority of men could vote, all men 21 and over in 1918
- Married women of men with property over 30 in 1918
- All women and men 21 and over in 1928

The Factory Acts (P126)

The Concept:

- Were a series of laws passed by the British government to make conditions and treatment more fair for workers, especially children and women.
- The first Act passed in 1802 starting to deal with child labour.
 - Could only work 12 hours
 - Needed to have clean clothes
 - Must have “some” elementary education

Timeline of Factory Rights

The First Factory Act - 1833 - Children

- No child workers under the age of 9
- Employers must have an age certificate for their child workers
- Children of 9-13 years to work no more than nine hours a day
- Children of 13-18 years to work no more than twelve hours a day
- Children are not to work at night
- Two hours of schooling each day for children
- Four factory inspectors were appointed to enforce the law

The Third Factory Act: - 1844 - Children and women

- 9 to 13 years old to work a maximum of six and a half hours on weekdays and only six hours on Saturday
- 14 to 18 year olds to work a maximum of 12 hours a day and the same applied to women
- Child workers' ages were to be verified by surgeons
- Three hours of education a day for children

1833

1844

1842

1850

1842 - Women and Children

(2nd Factory Act) Mines and Collieries Act:

- All women, and children under the age of 10, were banned from working underground
- No one under 15 working winding gear in mines

Fourth factory Act, The Mines Act:

- Established the legal working day as from 6am to 6pm
- Gave powers for mines inspectors to go underground

Timeline of Factory Rights

(5th Factory Act) The Factory and Workshop Act: - 1878

Children

- No children under the age of 10 were to be employed

1878

Seventh factory act was 1891:

- No children under the age of 11 to be employed

1891

1880

(6th Factory Act) Education Act:

- School attendance was mandatory for children up to the age of 10

1902

(8th Factory Act) Education Act:

- A system of secondary education was established
- Reasonable safety measures - e.g. safe temperature must be maintained for all workers, appropriate bathrooms.

Correlation Between The Two

- The factory rights were created after the extension of voting rights. When the extension of voting rights came out, more factory workers were allowed to vote, this meant that they had more of say in government related activities.
- The Factory Rights were made to help factory workers and fix conditions.

The Factory Acts (Pg 126)

- Although the government was starting to regulate the economy this is still seen as liberalism as the individual is still valued and at the centre of the legislation.
- Society began to see the value of decent working conditions, reasonable working hours and education.
- This led to the idea of equal opportunity, where everyone had the opportunity to have economic success

3a. What were some restrictions the Factory Acts put in place?

3b. In what way did the Factory Acts go against classical liberal economic values?

3c. In what other ways were the factory acts based on key liberal values

Reactions To
Classical Liberalism:
The Union
Movement

Labour Unions (Pg 127)

- At one point in Canada you could be put in jail for quitting a job.
- This was possible because of the Master and Servant Act (1847)
- This act also made it illegal to protest against labour laws.

How do fight against the business owners?

What Is A Labor Union?

- Organization of workers
- Utilize tactics that hurt big businesses to obtain better:
 - Working Conditions
 - Hours
 - Benefits (Workers Compensation, Vacations, Maternity)
- Standing together ensures they cannot all be fired
- Use strikes & collective bargaining to improve conditions

A hand-drawn illustration of a wooden signpost. The sign is rectangular and tilted slightly to the right, with the text "A SHORT HISTORY OF TRADE UNIONS" written in a simple, hand-drawn font. The sign is attached to a wooden post. In the background, there is a picket line with several picketers holding signs, and a dark, textured background suggesting a night scene or a dense crowd.

A SHORT HISTORY
OF TRADE UNIONS

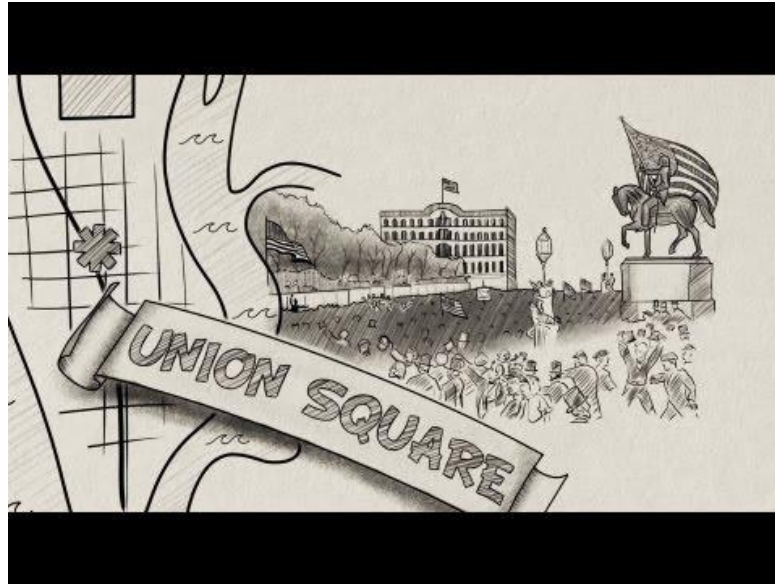

Early Setbacks for Unions

- Laissez-Faire Capitalism has governments protecting Smith's version of capitalism (owners) over workers.
- Great Railroad Strike of 1877
 - Workers strike to protest wage cuts
 - Violence erupted in many cities for a week
 - Ends with President Rutherford B. Hayes sends in Federal Troops to put down strike
- Haymarket Riot 1886
 - Workers protesting in Haymarket Square Chicago
 - Police arrive and bomb is thrown at police killing some and causing riot
 - Public blames labor unions and views them as radical, violent, and mostly foreigner

The Slow Progression of Rights - Some Stats:

By 1900 in the US there were over 23,000 union based labour strikes, with about half being successful

- Most factory workers are still working 12 hours per day 6 sometimes 7 days a week
- No vacations, sick leave, injury or unemployment compensation

Pros

- Higher wages and raises
- Protection of workers
- Less working hours
- Retirement benefits
- Shy workers may benefit the most
- Benefits for families
- More flexible working conditions
- Prevention of mental problems
- Avoidance of excessive workload
- Workers' preferences may be taken more seriously
- Introduction of minimum wages
- Labor unions can increase pressure on whole industries
- Better coordination for collective bargaining
- Less possibilities for favoritism
- Right to strike
- Higher job security
- Seniority often pays off

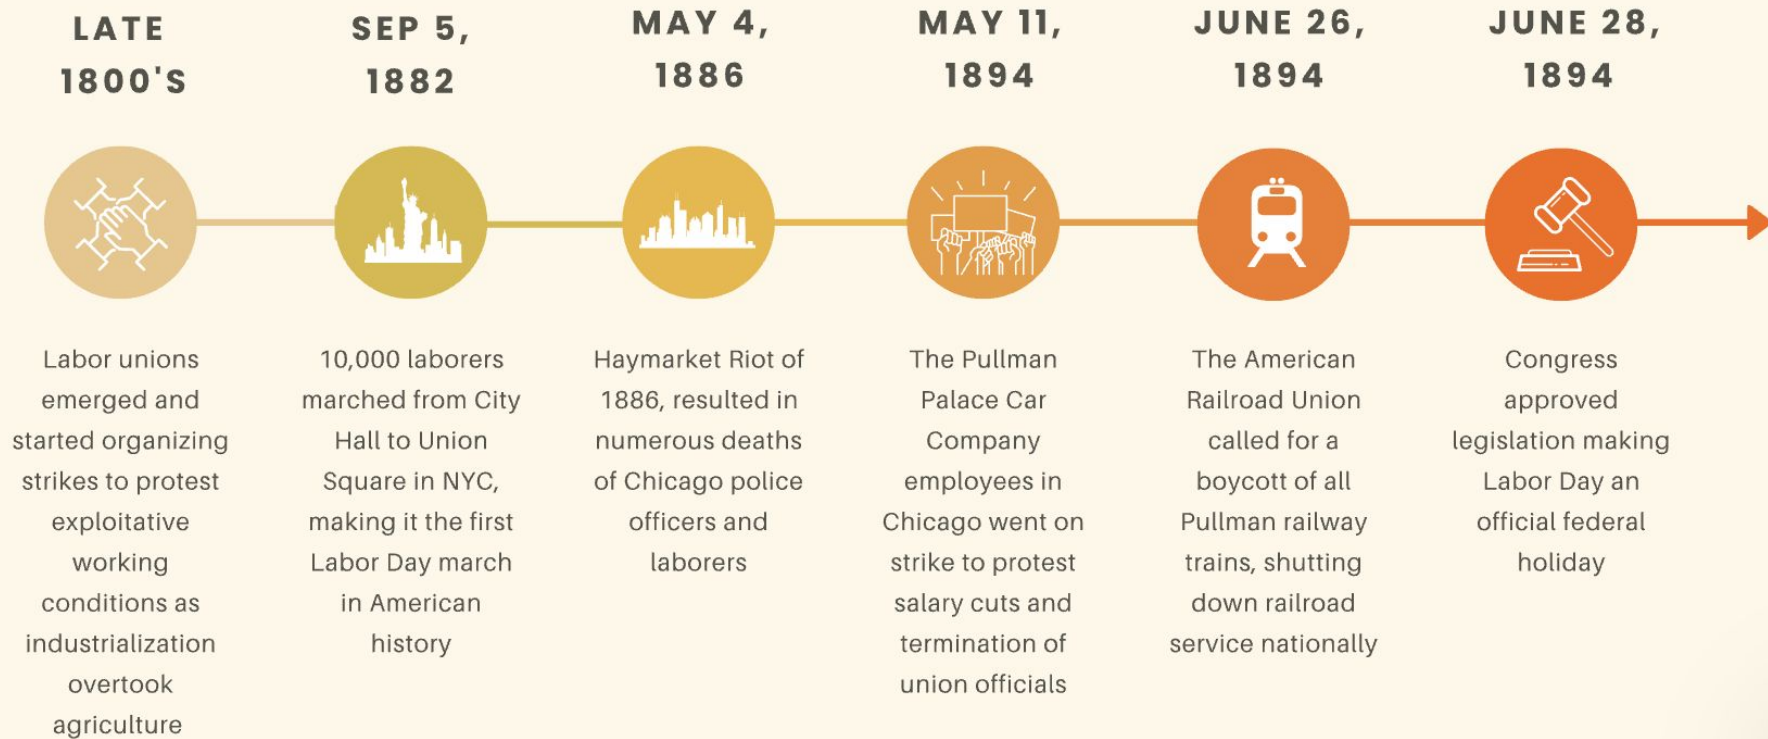

Cons

- Equal treatment may not take into account work quality of work
- Firing bad workers may be difficult
- Joining some unions may cost money
- Individual preferences may be restricted
- Problems in economic downturns for firms
- Lower flexibility of firms in general
- Firms may be less eager to hire workers
- Good workers may leave the company
- Incentives of unions might be flawed
- Collaboration between employees may suffer
- Outcome depends on the negotiation skills of unions
- Price increases

Rise of Unions

LABOR DAY HISTORY

Events that sparked the creation of Labor Day

The Winnipeg General Strike (Pg 128)

Leurs employeurs ont refusé de négocier.

- One of the most significant labour actions in Canadian history.
- In 1919 thousands of workers left their jobs for 6 weeks
- The government ended this strike by force but unions considered it a victory

Labour Unions (Pg 128)

- Labour unions are an example of the evolution of liberalism.
- Labour unions are an extension of individual rights, in this case for working people.

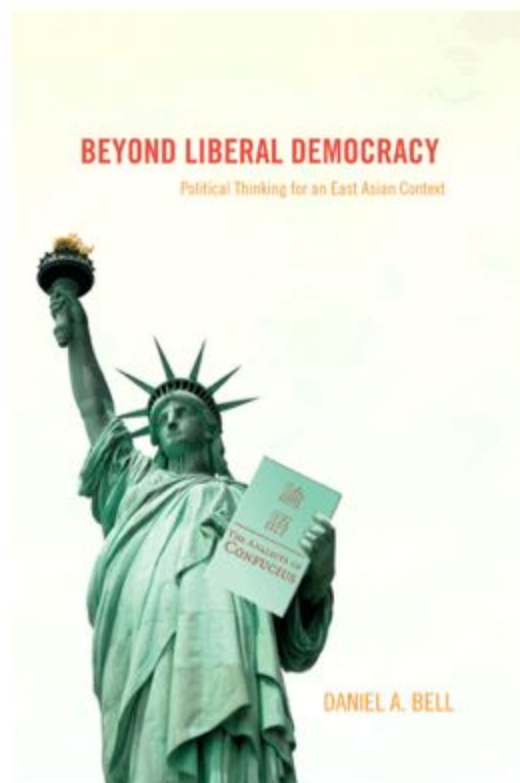

Labour Unions (Pg 128)

- Labour unions use the following rights to further their cause and gain better wages and working conditions
 - Freedom of Assembly
 - Freedom of Association
 - Freedom of Speech
- All of these are liberal values

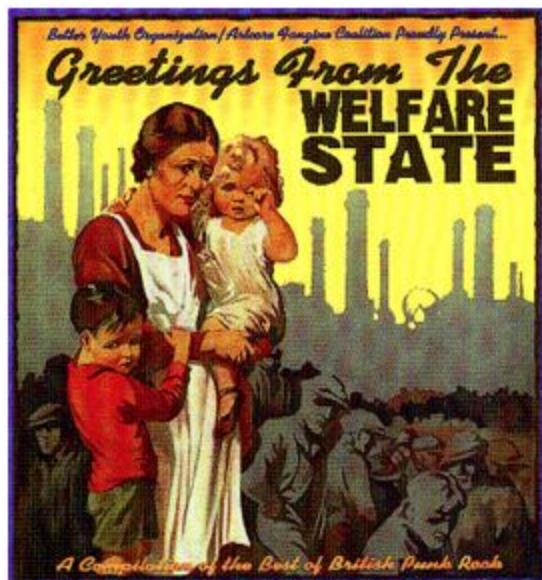

Reactions To Classical Liberalism: The Welfare State

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

- There were very few liberal democracies in Europe in the 1800's
- Those that were democracies usually only extended the right to vote to male landowners

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

- As the century progressed the vote was given to more and more people.
- By the late 1800's middle and working class males were given the right to vote

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

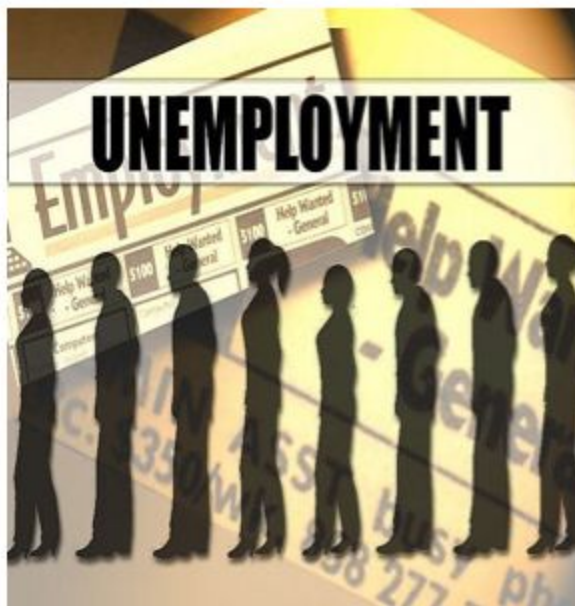

- As a wider range of people were given the vote, governments needed to come up with a variety of policies to appeal to these new voters.

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

- What type of government policies do you think would appeal to the middle and working class people?

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

- The introduction of government programs such as
 - Unemployment insurance
 - Old age pensions
- Resulted in the formation of what we now call the welfare state

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

- The welfare state is one in which the government plays a large role in providing for the common good of the people
- Government may provide services such as education, health care, employment and disability insurance, public housing and social assistance

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

You Can't Lose
What You Don't Have,
Poverty Is Economic Security.

- Classic liberals argue strongly against the welfare state suggesting that it stifles motivation, innovation and creates a dependency on the government.
- Modern liberals suggest that when people are healthy, safe and economically secure they are more creative and productive

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

- The beginning of the welfare state in Europe can be traced to workhouses.
- Workhouses were provided food and shelter to those who could not do so for themselves
- Those that could work were sent to work in factories and other industries

Increasing Rights and Government Intervention: The Welfare State (Pg 129)

- Views on poverty began to eventually change and welfare programs could be seen as early as the 1890's
- Labour groups, social groups, and unions are credited for the advancement of these policies.

16. How did the attitude towards the poor change in modern liberals from the workhouses to the welfare state?

Other Reactions To Classical Liberalism: Feminism

Evolution of Individual Rights and Collective Rights (Pg 130)

- Other groups other than white males started to wonder why they were being left out of the political , economic, and social processes of society
- Citizens, including feminists and human rights activists began pressuring society for changes

Early Feminism (Pg 130)

What Can I Do?

Plenty, Sister!

- Industrialization changed the role of women in society
- Jobs traditionally held by women, such as production of clothing, were now done by factories owned by men.

Early Feminism (Pg 130)

- Women who once worked in the home, now found themselves working in factories under male supervisors.
- Most men were not happy with this and tried to limit the hours and wages women could get

Early Feminism (Pg 130)

FEMINISM
IS THE RADICAL
NOTION THAT WOMEN ARE PEOPLE

- Many of the liberal values gained by society in the 1800's did not apply equally to women
- Women were not allowed to pursue many careers or vote

What is Feminism?

- ❖ Feminism is the belief in equal treatment for both men and women.
- ❖ Prior there was an idea of "Separate Spheres" → 19th century Victorian era = inequality, inferiority of women, mute.

What is a suffragette?

- ❖ a woman seeking the right to vote through organized protest.
→ Emmeline Pankhurst

Early Feminism (Pg 130)

- Emily Stowe was the first female doctor in Canada
- She had to attend university in the US because no Canadian university would allow her to attend
- She became a huge advocate for women's rights in Canada

Early Feminism (Pg 131)

are women
human

And Other
International Dialogues

CATHARINE A. MACKINNON

- Women in Canada began to push for the right to vote
- The right to vote is called suffrage
- The suffrage movement is considered the first wave of feminism, the belief in social, political and economical equality for women

Early Feminism (Pg 131)

FEMINISTS ♀ ROCK! ♀

- Women started to gain the right to vote in western countries between 1890 and 1920
- Canada was one of the last western democracies to grant women the vote in 1918 (However, women in Quebec did not get the right until 1940 in provincial elections)

Early Feminism (Pg 131)

- The Famous Five were a group of Canadian Women that fought for women's rights in Canada
- They fought to have women recognized as "persons"

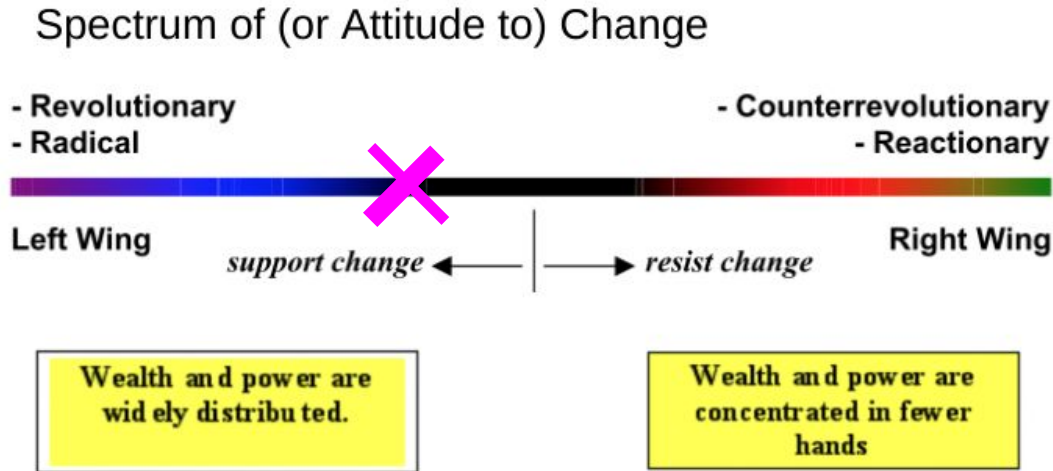

Early Feminism (Pg 131)

- Women were not declared persons under the law until 1929
- Early feminists also supported, and fought for, the rights of other groups such as children and minorities.

Where does the feminist movement sit on the spectrum of change and why?

Feminism has had a broad range of movements, ranging centuries. Classical feminists would be placed on the left side, they believe in liberal values as they WANT change and are looking for more group rights over individual rights.

Protection of Human Rights

(Pg 132)

- As governments started to look after the welfare of its citizens, they started to consider what should be considered basic human rights.
- These rights should be the minimum expected of an human being

(Pg 132)

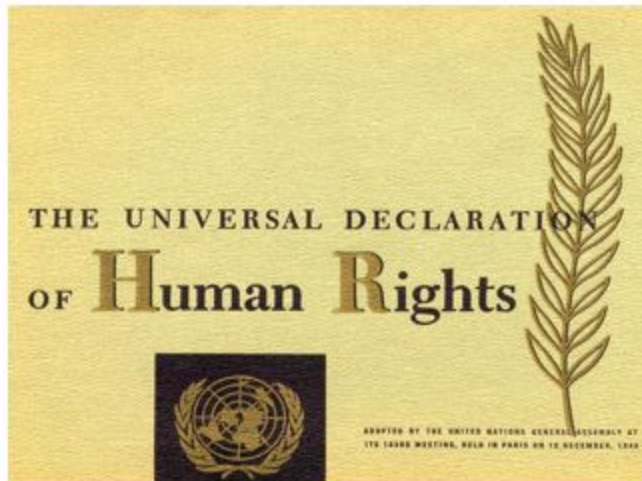

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights

- The United Nations, in 1948, came up with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights
- Some of these rights include
 - Right to take part in government
 - Right to be treated equally under the law
 - Right to liberty and freedom of thought and worship
 - Right to own private property

(Pg 132)

- The declaration goes far beyond the previous rights and includes ideas about work and slavery
 - Equal pay for equal work
 - Just remuneration to ensure a dignified living
 - Choice of employment

Protection of Human Rights (Pg 133)

- Human rights today have been extended to all people in Canada including race, economic status, sexual orientation, gender because of the modern liberalism movement

Protection of Human Rights (Pg 133)

- The next step is for western liberalism democracies to be able to make progress internationally to achieve rights for all people around the world

Protection of Human Rights (Pg 133)

- Possible ways to protect human rights internationally include
 - Political pressure
 - Social pressure
 - Military involvement
 - United Nations

From Classic to Modern Liberalism (Pg 134)

- Factors that signify the change from classic liberalism to modern liberalism
 - Labour Unions
 - Extension of voting rights
 - Recognition of women's rights
 - Recognition of minority rights

From Classic to Modern Liberalism (Pg 134)

- During the Industrial Revolution government focus was on the individual and classic liberalism
- By the late 1800' s and early 1900' s governments were changing their focus to providing greater equality and moving to modern liberalism ideas

From Classic to Modern Liberalism (Pg 134)

- Classic Liberalism
 - Involves no government intervention in the economy
 - This allowed people the freedom to innovate and increase production
- Modern Liberalism
 - Involves significant government intervention (at times)

From Classic to Modern Liberalism

(Pg 134)

- Classical Liberalism
 - Suggests that the only function of government is to protect rights to life, liberty, and property
 - Contributed to great wealth for some
 - Increased in the income gap
- Modern Liberalism
 - Proposes that people rights should promote equality

From Classic to Modern Liberalism (Pg 134)

- Classic Liberalism
 - Emphasizes economic liberalism and promotes the freedom of risk takers and business owners
 - Contributed to new ideologies that opposed capitalism such as communism and fascism
 - Contributed to the Great Depression

Summary of the Welfare State (Pg 136)

- There were negative consequences to laissez-faire economic policies during the industrial revolution.
- These negative consequence spurred social movements to help change these negative impacts
- Government intervention would increase to appeal to a wider range of new voters

Summary of the Welfare State (Pg 136)

- Some of these social and economic groups included labour unions, feminists and human rights activists
- These movements pushed for better rights for children, women and workers
- All of these movements and government changes led to a new idea called modern liberalism.

Overview Society went from...

To Capitalism
Little or no government regulation of business competition
Distribution of wealth across a wider range of society

Mercantilism Economy
Government regulation of business
Monopolies
Accumulation of Wealth by a few people

To.....

Ideological Values

Collectivism

Individualism

Modern Liberalism

- Interested in creating equality of opportunity for all individuals
- Freedoms and rights favour the individual, with more individuals in society receiving rights
- Government intervenes to ensure that the most vulnerable people (for example, the sick, elderly, unemployed, working poor) are cared for

Classical Liberalism

- Interested in protecting the freedoms of individuals in economic affairs
- Maximum rights and freedoms for certain individuals (entrepreneurs)
- Government rules, regulations (for example, minimum wage), and social programs (for example, health care, old age security pensions, employment insurance) are kept to a minimum, with every person acting on his or her own behalf
